Everyone loves a parade

Christ n

It's Christmas time in Upland.

Nowhere could anyone recognize the time of the year more than Saturday in downtown Upland. Holiday tinsel and music brought smiles to the faces of children of all ages during the Upland Town Center Christmas parade.

The event was sponsored by the Upland Town Center Merchants Association and the Upland Chamber of Commerce. This year, for the first time, organizers staged the parade on a Saturday morning instead of the traditional Friday night.

"The merchants association decided to have the parade Saturday morning so more people could participate and enjoy the parade," said Ron Marshall, parade coordinator.

The merchants apparently guessed right. Crowds lined Second Avenue and surrounding streets to watch 90 entries ring in the season. "We estimate that 5,000 people watched the parade. It was tremendous, the weather was great. Everyone seemed to have a great time," said Tony Malone, chamber executive director. Agent Dick Noville, of the Upland Police Department estimated about 4,200 spectators.

The 1984 Upland parade was the largest in the city's history. The number of entries doubled the number that participated last year, Marshall said.

"The parade kicks off the Christmas season in Upland and it gets everyone in the spirit of things," Marshall said. "There is no judging and no trophies are awarded. Everything is just for fun."

The jolly old elf himself, Santa Claus, thrilled youngsters when he arrived at the end of the parade atop an Upland Fire Department engine. After the festivities, Santa talked to the children at the town center kiosk.

The parade started off with the spirited beat of the Los Angeles Rhythmettes, a drill team and drum squad.

The grand marshal was McGruff, the canine crime prevention mascot.

rode in vintage cars provided by the Mustang Club of Upland.

Costumed characters from several restaurants in the area brought smiles and cheers from the crowd. Bullwinkle, from the Bullwinkle Family Fun Center; Wendy and the new Chicken, from Wendy's Old Fashioned Hamburgers; Chuck E. Cheese, from Chuck E. Cheese's Pizza Time Theater; Billy Bob, the Showbiz Pizza Place bear; and Grimace, from McDonalds Restaurant.

In addition, the costumed characters of John "Captain Jack the pirate" Musser; Disney, from the Character Connection; and Raggedy Ann and Andy, from Merrill Lynch Realty, also were popular with the crowd.

Marching bands were supplied by Alder Junior High School, Fontana Junior High School and Sequoia Junior High School, all from Fontana.

A replica of the "Cyrus K. Holliday" locomotive engine was presented by Santa Fe Railroad. Members of the Red Dragon Karate Club of Upland demonstrated their skills as they marched in the parade.

Woodworker becomes a 'living treasure' in area

By Josie Garza

Sam Maloof of Rancho Cucamonga is a living treasure. To support that conclusion the Rancho Cucamonga City Council recently presented Maloof a resolution declaring the artistic woodworker the city's first-ever "Living City Treasure."

The city's Historic Preservation Commission recommended the council take that action.

"Part of the ordinance when the Historic Preservation Commission was first formed was not only to recognize landmarks but also people in the community who have contributed to the community and the world too," said Maxine Strane, chairwoman of the commission.

"He is a world famous craftsman with his woodwork and he's lived here most of his life and we thought he would be a good one to start the tradition with," Strane explained.

After receiving his most recent honor, Maloof found himself at a loss for words.

"My wife (Alfreda Ward Maloof) is 99 percent of my work. Without her, I don't think I would have continued. I feel very humble about this," Maloof said quietly.

Later in his home after having time to digest the recognition, Maloof said there's nothing like being recognized by the city where he's lived the past 32 years.

However, this is not the first time Maloof, 65, has been declared a living treasure. Prior to the city's announcement, the state proclaimed Maloof a state living treasure (he is one of the first so named by the state).

A long driveway lemon groves on the woodworker's property leads to Maloof's "meandering" house which doubles as a showcase for his craftsmanship.

The home is made almost completely of wood. In the span of a day, people continue sporadically to come in and out of Maloof's home to see his work, discuss work they'd like him to do for them and to talk.

President Jimmy Carter is expected to visit Maloof's home sometime in the near future. President Carter, a master woodworker himself, is familiar with Maloof's work.

Two of Maloof's rocking chairs are located in Washington, D.C., one in the White House and the other in the vice president's house.

Numerous other furniture pieces crafted by Maloof are exhibited at distinguished art museums throughout the country.

Art abounds in the home of Sam and Alfreda (affectionately called "Freda" by her husband) Maloof.

At one time, she was an artist herself who specialized in painting and ceramics. She worked extensively with Native Americans in an Indian school in Santa Fe, New Mexico.

The two met while she was on leave from her job in New Mexico and was doing her graduate study in fine arts at Scripps College in Claremont.

The woman behind the woodworker and master craftsman has spent most of the past 37 years of the marriage running the business aspect of her husband's work.

"She keeps things humming. She keeps all the books ... I just make the furniture," said Maloof.

His creativity started at an early age. While in high school in Chino, Maloof made furniture for his Lebanese family.

After graduation, he worked as a graphics artist, another area in which he was self-taught.

After a stint in the army during World War II, Maloof spent another year working as a graphics artist devoting his time and energies into designing and making furniture.

"So I quit my job and started making furniture and I've been working ever since and there hasn't ever been a dry period. It always worked out," Maloof said.

At his age of 65, most men and women have retired from their jobs. When does Maloof plan to retire?

"I'm not going to retire ever. I retired 35 years ago when I started making furniture.

Judges of the Mr. Alta Loma contest will be scrutinizing contestants' legs, modeling and answers to embarrassing questions at 7:30 p.m. Dec. 14 at Alta Loma High School.

A total of 12 male students will be subjecting themselves to the rigors of this year's beauty

"I can't wait to see that one," said Lorraine Robison, one of the coordinators of the event.

Other competitive events include the legs contest where contestants model shorts, the modeling of a sportswear outfit and a question-and-answer session.

For the person named Mr. Alta Loma $100 and a plaque will be his reward along with the knowledge that he was selected as the most attractive and

Christmas story unfolds on panes

By Terri Tirella

Merchants at Millers Outpost Center in Rancho Cucamonga are bringing the words "Twas the night before Christmas," to life on business windows.

Children can see the story, "A Visit from St. Nicolas," in larger-than-life drawings on windows at the center, on the corner of Foothill Boulevard and Archibald Avenue.

The story, starting at the northwestern corner of the shopping center, stretches across 84 window panes with pictures and corresponding verses on 18 of the 20 businesses.

"Each window has a scene and a part of the story written on it," said Bill Batchelor, owner of Rancho Sports and the law office adjacent to it.

"I can't remember anyplace in the valley where you can see something like this," he said.

The window-painters Pat Meyer and Marilyn Daugherty agreed with Batchelor. "We've wanted to do something like this for the last two years," Daugherty said. Having center-themed window paintings with a continuous story is usually impossible because the anchor stores usually are chain-owned with mountains of red tape and people to get approval from.

Getting a business center to agree on anything can be difficult, but the center is so new it has yet to form a merchant's association.

"If this concept works, at Easter we might try another story," Batchelor said. The story of "Peter Rabbit" may grace the center's windows.

Batchelor said each year, businesses contract to have their windows decorated for the holidays individually. The mural, which fit into the center's theme for its winter's sale, "Twas the Night Before Christmas" is a first attempt.

"The by-product is people stopping to look at the mural may see merchandise and want to shop here, but that is secondary," Batchelor said.

Batchelor said the merchants invited teachers from local schools to bring classes to the center to view the window mural as an outing.

Merchants agreed to share the cost of the window painting in proportion to their share of the window being painted. "Putting something like this together is not a simple task," he said.

Area Assistance League hopes for a big fund raiser

By Josie Garza

Members of the Assistance League of Upland are busy making handmade Christmas tree decorations and table centerpieces for the sixth annual Christmas Tree Brunch Sunday.

The 60-member non-profit organization based in Rancho Cucamonga is hoping 1,000 people will show at their biggest fund-raiser of the year, said club member Roberta Plott. The club's goal is 300 more than last year's attendance.

Reservations for the brunch in the New Empire Ballroom at the Red Lion Inn, 222 N. Vineyard Ave., Ontario, may still be made for the gala and are required for those planning to attend.

Holiday food doesn't have to be fattening

By LINDA BERGSTEDT

Holiday dining needn't be heavily laden with rich foods to be enjoyable.

Witness the proliferation of low-calorie, taste-tempting recipes offered by many organizations.

An example is "Holidays a la Heart," a pamphlet of fat/calorie conscious recipes, being offered by the American Heart Association, Greater Los Angeles Affiliate Divisions and California Affiliate Chapters, including the San Bernardino County Chapter.

"The traditional holiday table laden with rich foods remains an American heritage from the Pilgrims. But for 20th century descendants of these hardy forefathers, holiday overeating no longer make nutritional sense," the Heart Association says.

To preserve holiday traditions with food as a feature attraction, the Heart Association presents a variety of festive foods, easy to prepare and especially suited for the fat/calorie conscious ... but so delicious, they can be enjoyed by everyone.

"A word about fat in food preparation. Controlling fat means limiting not only amounts of fat, but also selecting the right kind. Alternate cooking methods and ingredient substitutions are listed below to guide you in modifying your own favorite holiday recipes," the Heart Association says.

The association offers the following suggestions for recipe substitutions for healthier eating of holiday feasts.

In place of 1 egg, use 2 egg whites and 1 teaspoon oil. Use polyunsaturated margarine (the first ingredient on the label must say liquid vegetable oil) in place of butter. Solid shortening can be replaced by polyunsaturated margarine or polyunsaturated vegetable oil (corn, soy, safflower, sunflower or cottonseed).

In place of whole milk, try low-fat or non-fat milk, while half and half may be replaced with evaporated skim milk or Mocha Mix. Instead of whipped topping, try 1/4 cup ice water sprinkled with 1/4 cup non-fat dry milk

HAMMER TOE

Hammer toe results from a shortening of a tendon leading to the toe. It causes the toe to assume a permanently curled-under position. In this position, the joint between the bones of the toe is drawn upward and rubs against the shoe. A callus or corn can develop that can make wearing a shoe unbearably painful. Treatment of hammer toe is aimed at straightening the toe so that its "knuckle" will not press against the shoe. Unfortunately, trying to stretch the tendon by massage usually does not work. The most effective treatment is surgery allowing the offending toe joint to return to its normal position, thus relieving the constant pressure that gives the pain.

The same process of tendon shortening (mentioned above) can occur in the hand.

Old-fashioned welcome waiting at Rains House

By Terri Tirella

Candlelight, oil lamps and fireplaces ablaze, will welcome visitors to the Rancho Cucamonga Rains House third annual Christmas Candlelight Tour on Dec. 14 from 5 to 8 p.m.

The house will be decorated in a way museum volunteers hope the Rains' might once have done, according to volunteer Marge Stamm.

"We'll decorate a 12-foot Christmas tree and the mantels as well as the outside of the house," Stamm said.

The house is decorated each year for the annual historical society dinner sponsored by Las Guias, the docent organization for the historic landmark.

Stamm said that former Las Guias president Dorothy Schmidt initiated the idea of opening the house to the public after the dinner.

"The only time to see it (the Rains House in its Christmas splendor) is at night," Stamm said. "With the fireplaces lit, oil burning lamps."

The house takes on a "mellow glow" and docents will serve old-fashion refreshments, ginger cookies and hot cider.

The pathway to the house will be illuminated by candlelight. "It's like walking into a whole different world," Stamm said.

"We want the community to be aware that they have their own cradle here. Few cities can boast of the house that started them (being in such good condition)," Stamm said.

The 12-foot Christmas tree is decorated with 100 candles, an electric version of the wax variety, with ornaments made of calico by Las Guias. The mantels are draped with greenery. "We might be a little more sophisticated in our decorating than the Rains might have," Stamm said.

In any decorating or party preparation, Las Guias volunteers try to include any items that might be found on the house grounds currently or during the time the Rains lived at the Casa de Rancho Cucamonga. "We make a bread using macadamia nuts (from a tree in front of the house) we sell to raise funds," she said, and many of the foodstuffs served at the annual gourmet dinner are made with products from the house grounds.

The third annual event is a self-guided tour and will feature a display of children's antique toys in one of the children's bedrooms.

"People walk into the hall and we direct them through the dining room," she said. "Traffic is usually not a problem."

Last year about 300 people took advantage of the Christmas Candlelight tour "and we are just beginning to roll. We're expecting 500 this year," Stamm said.

The Los Guias members are suggesting a donation of $1 for adults attending the tour. Children are free.

Casa de Rancho Cucamonga, the oldest burnt-brick house in the area, is located at 7859 Vineyard Ave., at the corner of Vineyard and Hemlock. For more information, call 987-5941.

Teachers get dose of computer maintenance

Upland School District teachers got a lesson about computer maintenance during a recent workshop.

Gary Cisco, district mentor teacher with computers, conducted the workshop.

Teachers participating in the workshop brought their own computers to the workshop where they learned how to remove, clean and replace computer chips.

Loren Sanchez, assistant superintendent of instruction, arranged the program. Sanchez said although the district has a service contract for its hardware, the teachers will be able to correct many minor problems without making service calls.

are $22 per person.

Festivities will begin at 11:30 a.m. with a no-host social hour featuring Muf Accomozzo playing at the piano.

Brunch will be served at 12:30 p.m. Presenting a holiday theme musical revue during the brunch will be the Edgewood High School Trojanaires from West Covina.

Money raised at the brunch will be divided among the league's three philanthropic projects: the San Antonio Dental Center, Cucamonga Girls' Club and preparatory classes for the Scholastic Aptitude Tests (S.A.T.), college entrance examinations.

As is traditional at the brunch, six Christmas trees fully-decorated by members and a formal holiday gourmet table setting complete with gourmet food, china, silver and crystal place settings for eight plus a Christmas Goose center piece will be given away.

An additional tree decorated with mauve and white floral arrangements by Peter Weiland of Weiland's Flowers and Gifts in Upland and underwritten by Foothill Independent Bank will also be given away at the event.

The Christmas trees and the Christmas brunch gourmet table setting will be given away in an opportunity ticket drawing.

Each tree given away will have a unique theme. Among the theme trees given away will be the "Winter Wonderland" tree featuring various handmade needlepoint ornaments in white and gold and a "Twelve Days of Christmas" tree displaying items mentioned in the famous yuletide song.

Free delivery will be provided for the trees standing more than six feet, Plott said.

Members of the table decoration committee have been working on the more than 50 brunch table centerpieces at the Archibald Avenue club house.

All table centerpieces feature a large red and white candy-striped candle in the center surrounded by green artificial foliage corporation and mom and pop stores it's a marvel they got all together and agreed on one thing."

Batchelor was the person who approached the Miller's Outpost store to join in the mural project. He said the store manager was willing to participate but was unable to obtain permission from the main office.

"I had to work my way up the ladder until I got to someone with authority," he said. Miller's Outpost has the largest windows in the center.

Meyers and Daugherty estimated the mural would take about 128 hours; or eight hours a day for a little more than two weeks.

"We had to quit early one day because it got too cold and the paint wouldn't dry," Daugherty said. The two women have operated Creative Windows by the Pains for three years.

The women made a smaller version of the shopping center with all the story outlined on all the windows, before beginning the four-part process of drawing, painting the white areas, adding the color and then detailing.

"In detailing we go back and see what we forgot," Meyer said. "We have to make sure he (the man in the story) is wearing the same blue shirt throughout the story."

Cleaning brick can be a tough, dirty job

By Gene Gary
Copley News Service

Q. I have recently bought an old house that is designated a National Historic Building.

I was told that sandblasting the brick would cause me to lose the NHB designation, so I investigated the cost and details of chemical cleaning of the bricks. I was surprised to learn that the use of "stripper" and washing with a garden hose were the primary steps. I figure that I can do this and save $2,600.

Do you agree that an amateur can do this? If so, where can I buy the stripper (in larger quantities, i.e., gallons) and what is the name of the product? — G.N., Columbus, Ohio

A. You should be able to clean the brick of major grime and dirt.

First, presoak the walls. Saturate the masonry with clean water and flush off all loose particles and dirt.

Then scrub down the walls with a solution of one-half cup trisodium phosphate and a half cup household detergent dissolved in 1 gallon of clear water. Scrub with a stiff fiber brush.

Rinse thoroughly to wash off all of the cleaning solution, dirt and mortar crumbs using clean pressurized water.

If this method does not clean the brick to your satisfaction, an acid cleaning may prove necessary. I would recommend a professional service if this proves to be the case.

Q. Our automatic screen door closers stick, leaving the doors propped open. Is there a way to lubricate them and what lubricant should I use? — Mrs. W.H.S.

A. Try cleaning first with naphtha or paint thinner. Wipe dry and apply WD-40 at the end where the rod goes into the cylinder. If this fails to work you may need to replace the cylinder unit.

Q. How can I prevent roots traveling 14 feet under a concrete slab from clogging my bathroom commode? — R.S.C.

A. The only solution to the problem is to cut the root where it enters underneath the slab. Large shrubs and trees should not be planted close to foundations and removal of any existing growth is essential to protect the foundation and your plumbing.

Q. My wife has electric extension cords strung all over the house. We have argued about the safety factors of this and I would like your advice.

The cords are both unattractive and I worry about someone tripping over one of them. But my main concern is safety in the use of electricity. — R.L.N.

A. An extension cord can be a handy thing around the house, but that's just what it is meant to be — a handy thing and not a permanent installation.

A common mistake made by users of extension cords is in the size area. The cord you use for a lamp, for instance, should not be used for a power tool. The amperage drawn by the electric power tool is too heavy for the typical household extension cord.

You are creating a fire hazard if you use extension cords in this manner. If you have power tools in the house and need an extension cord, its minimum gauge should be 18. But if you are using a long cord that tends to dissipate power, get a 16 or 14 gauge.

Also avoid hooking up too many lamps or small appliances to a single household extension cord, or you will risk the danger of overloading the circuit and again you could be creating a fire hazard.

The best solution is to check your household electric wiring and assure that it is adequate, with ample outlets available for household convenience.

Q. Is there a foolproof method for nailing picture hanger hooks on a plaster wall without cracking the plaster? I have tried putting a piece of scotch tape on the wall and then nailing through, but the plaster still cracks some. — Mrs. W.A.S.

A. If the pictures are relatively light (25 pounds or lighter), there are wall mounting fasteners that adhere to the wall with the epoxy type of adhesive. Many hardware stores have these kits.

If you wish to use a penetrating fastener, such as a nail or expansion bolt, first locate the joist. Then put an "X" of scotch tape and drill through into the joist, using an electric drill. This method, properly done, will prevent the plaster from cracking.

Write to Here's How, P.O. Box 190, San Diego, CA 92112.

PHOTO

By Holt Confer
Copley News Service

Everyone who has ever chosen a creative career in photography has had times when nobody, it appeared, needed his or her services.

It's a frightening, hair-pulling, tooth-gnashing, traumatic situation. Here you are, a skilled professional, with a major investment in equipment, yourself and a family to feed, and no one's hiring you to take pictures.

First of all (even though it won't be much consolation), those days when the phone doesn't ring, or clients don't come knocking on your door, may not have anything to do with the quality of the work you produce or your efforts to be charismatic.

Remember, the ad agencies and corporations hiring photographers are, like you and me, susceptible to swings in the economy. And just like you can count on the temperature of Lake Havasu City, Ariz., being 115 F in July, you can count on your best client shipping into an economic trough just when all your other business is lower than it should be.

So what's a body to do?

When business activity slows down, what you do pretty much depends on your economic status. If you happen to be one of the money-making superstars in the photography field, chances are, when things slow down, you'll rush off to some exotic spot for a rest.

However, most of us folks find that our non-billing time is best spent taking care of a variety of business-related activities:

1. Make sales calls. Tuck a well-prepared portfolio under your arm while you visit current and potential clients. It's also possible to make sales calls by telephone if the geographic area you're covering makes "house visits" too time-consuming.

Keep in mind, though, that you should be making sales calls all the time, not just when business slows down. Sales calls are never a quick fix for bringing work through the door.

2. Improve your skills with lighting, camera techniques or special setups. There are surely many things you've always wanted to try with your photographic equipment — situations that, if you had proof of your skills, might just attract a new type of client. Well, now that the picture-taking business is slow, why not get busy and create a few images for your portfolio?

3. Shoot stock. I supply pictures to two stock photo houses — Grant Heilman Photography, known worldwide for their agricultural and natural science files; and Uniphoto, a stock house covering a broad range of everyday-type subjects.

So whenever I'm not pushed for a deadline on a story or for pictures, and the weather cooperates (most of my stock stuff is shot outside), I'm out scouring fields and parks for those everyday situations that are the basis for continuing stock sales.

By the way, I look at stock photography almost like an annuity. The time and money I invest now gets paid back at some future date — hopefully with considerable appreciation.

4. How about your files? Filing is something most of us really dread, so as time goes by, little piles of paper mysteriously grow into large piles of paper.

Filing the files is one problem, emptying them is another problem. Frequently I find myself considering the possibility of expanding my bank of file cabinets. When the urge gets too strong, all I really have to do is dig through much of the garbage I've accumulated, throw at least a third of it away, and suddenly I have all the filing space I really need. Believe it or not, those letters and sales brochures from 1973 are no longer much good.

Horsin' Around for Fun a

Horseplay is acceptable behavior one afternoon a year for members of the Alta Loma Junior High School Riding Club.

The club has indulged itself for the past 12 years in a horseback play day in which the group's usual lunchtime study of equine science gives way to an afternoon of competition and games.

Supervised by co-advisers Mary Miles and Charma Hill, 30 female members (the few male members of the club chose not to participate) rode their horses to the horse ring at Heritage Park up on Beryl Street near Hillside Road in Rancho Cucamonga for the events.

Play day was the first of three riding activities for club members.

Riders first tested their ability to jump on and off their horses by playing musical bags.

The game began with every participant on horseback. A variety of large feed bags, one less than the total number of participants, were situated in various areas of the ring.

Music was played and when it stopped, the girls jumped off their horses, scattered around the ring looking for a bag and quickly stood on top of it. The girl unable to find a feed bag to stand on was eliminated from the contest.

The game continued until there was one winner, Rena Arutunian.

In the water race game, young riders rode their horses around the ring while holding a cup of water. The object of the game was to keep as much water in the cup as possible.

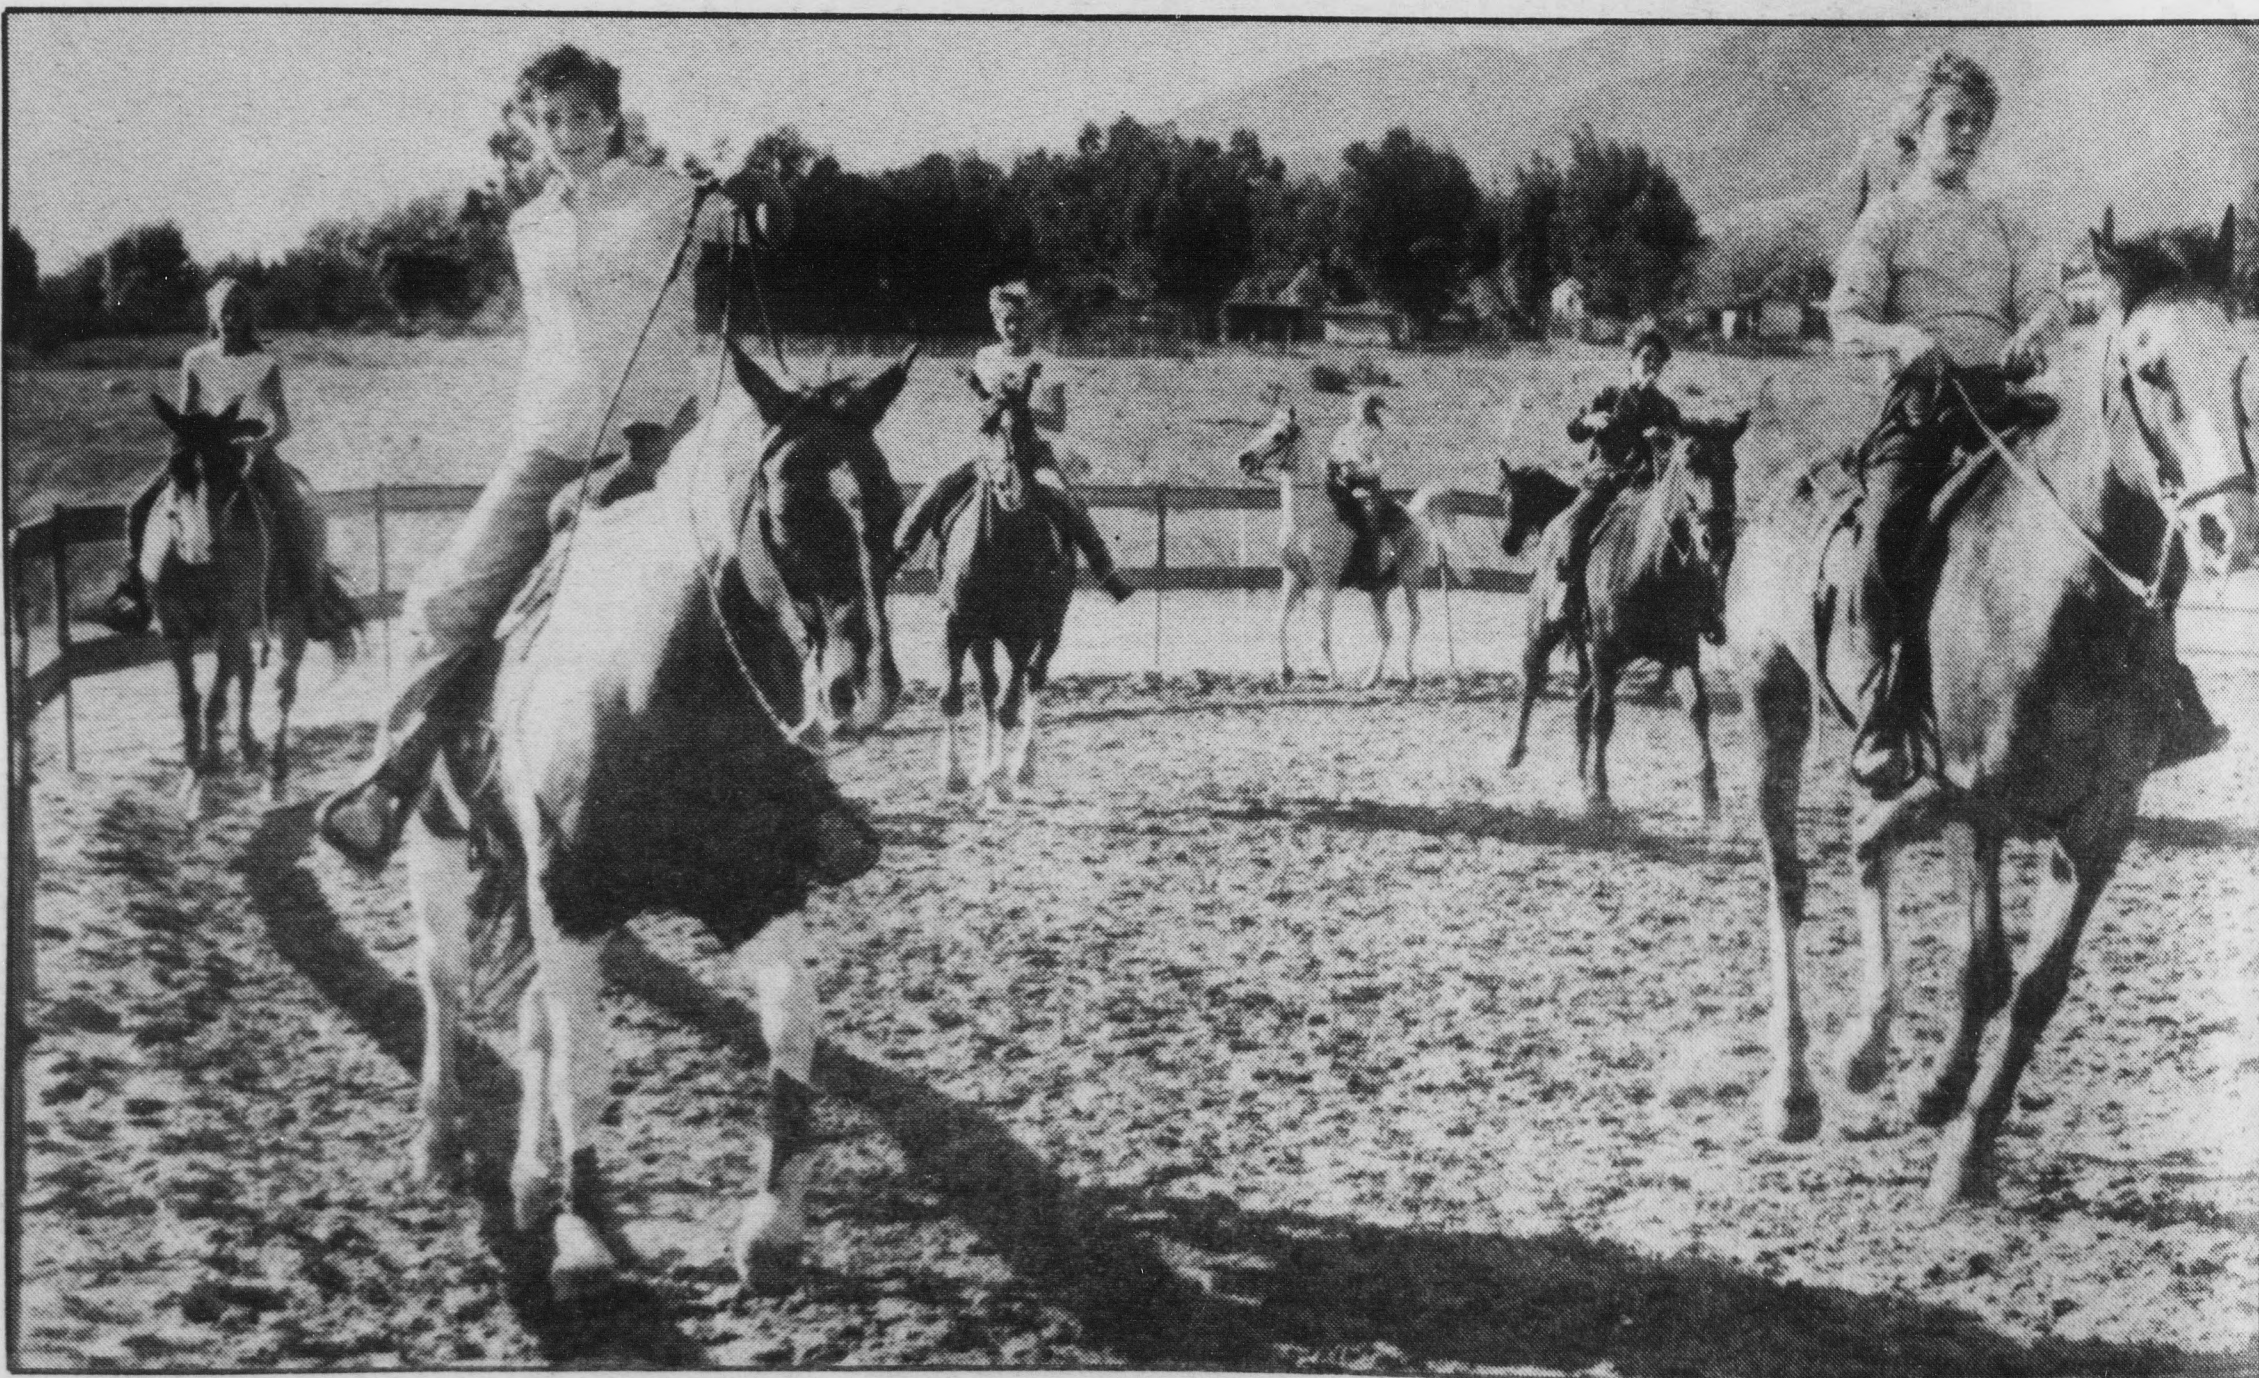

Sidra Keys won the event.

Teamwork proved valuable in the partner race, the only timed event of the day. In a given time, the girls had to relay back and forth from a barrel to their partners, passing a macrame owl.

Winners were Molly Maynard and Keri Yount.

Probably one of the messiest events was the egg and spoon contest.

Some girls laughed, and others screamed as some of the eggs dropped and cracked on the girls and their horses.

Michelle Glennon won the event after she was able to keep her egg from breaking.

In the next event, the obedience of the horses was tested.

Riders prodded their mounts forward until instructed to have them "reverse the walk," or move backwards, 10 paces. Molly Maynard's horse carried the instructions out best, winning the event for her.

Club members teamed up with partners again for the crepe paper event. The girls were required to ride in pairs while each partner held one side of a strip of crepe paper between them and Miles shouted orders through a megaphone. Riders were eliminated from competition if they dropped or ripped the paper.

Before long, all teams but Molly Maynard and Keri Yount and Rena Arutunian and Kara Henry were eliminated.

Their task was made harder by cutting the strips of paper in half for the next round of competition. Arutunian and Henry emerged victorious.

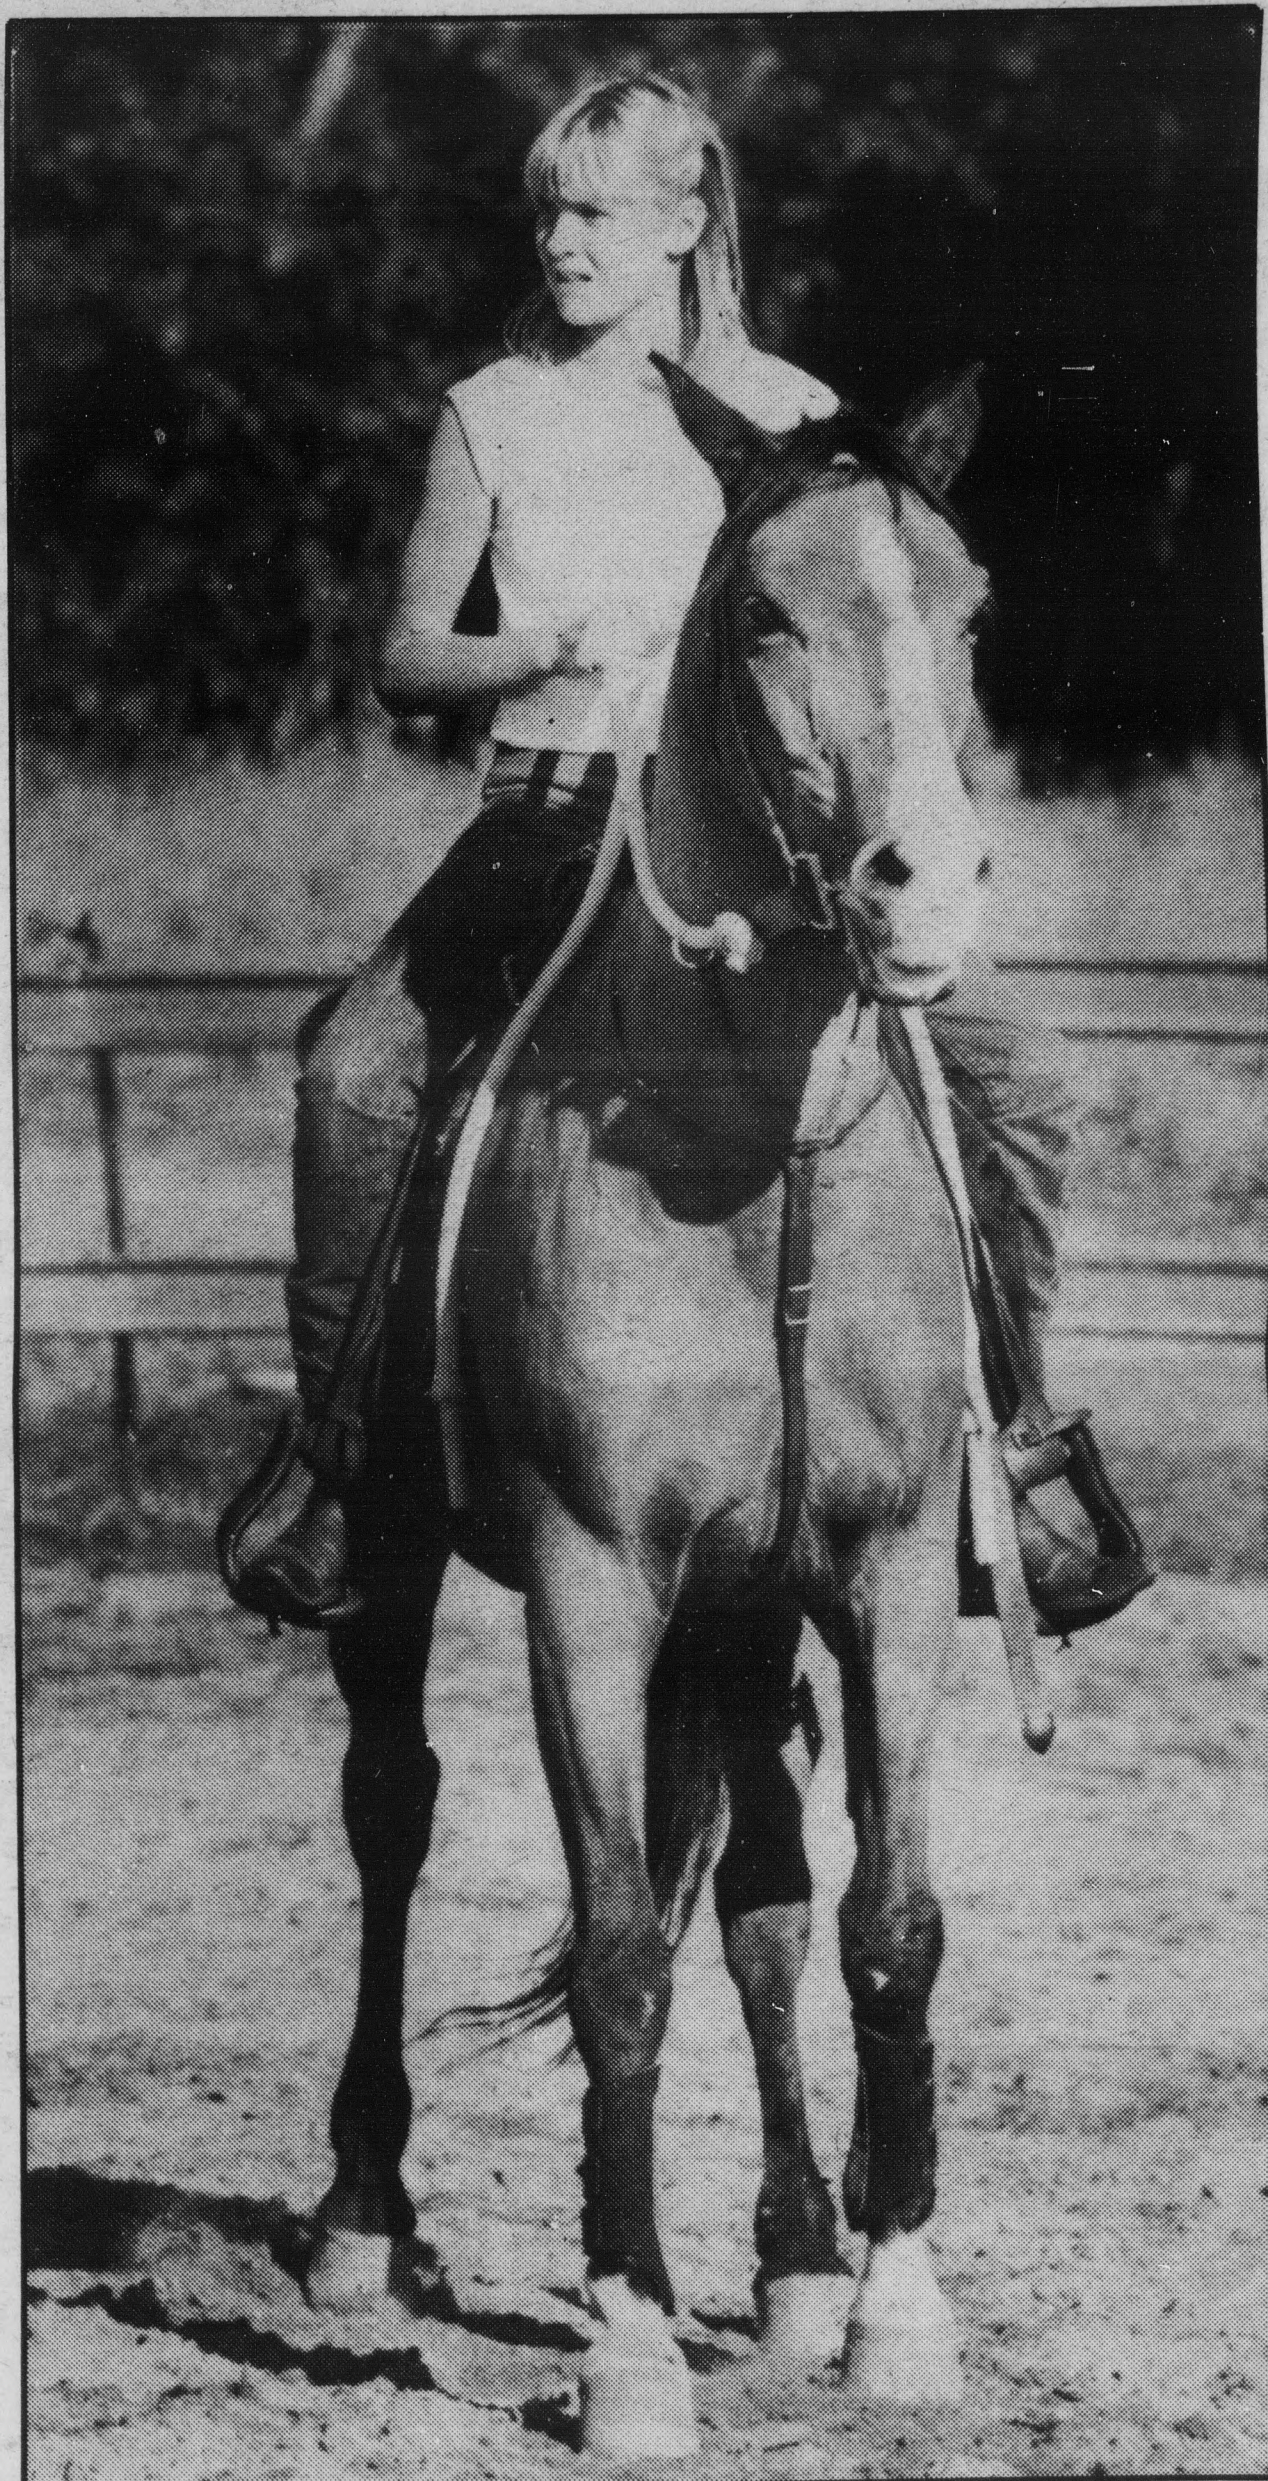

The last event of the afternoon involved placing play money between each rider and her saddle. Competitors had to ride their horses without losing the play money.

When the contest narrowed down to Kim Donovan and Tracy Latpow, the advisers had each girl place a bill under one knee. Donovan won the event, her prize an artificial apple toy for the horse.

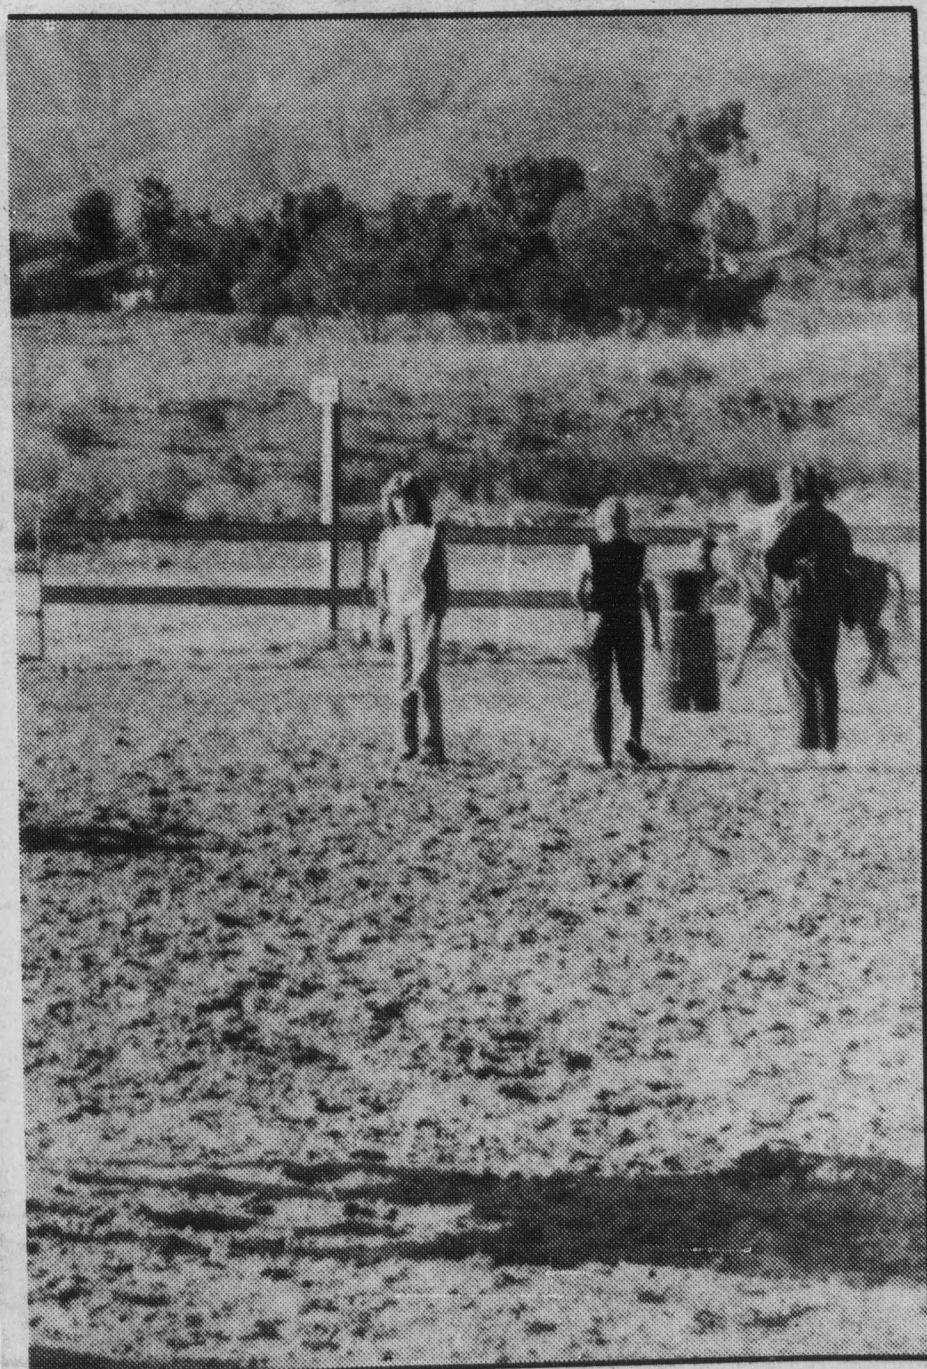

Other prizes of the day were more practical, including grooming equipment, saddle covers, a garment bag, and lead rope for the horse.

The club's next riding activity will be a six-hour trail ride to and from Mt. Baldy in March.

Following the trail ride, members will be competing in their own riding show at Heritage Park in May.

Members of the Alta Loma Junior High School Riding Club played a variety of equestrian games for prizes last Tuesday afternoon at Heritage Park in Rancho Cucamonga. Molly Maynard and Keri Yount (top left) were two members of the predominately all-female club who were finalists in the crepe paper event. The object of the game was to perform a variety of riding stunts while holding the paper and without tearing it. Riders tried to sit on fake dollar bills and ride without the paper falling to the ground (bottom left). Valerie Miles (above) waits for directions during one of the play day events.

Defatted Pan Gravy

Your roast will be more flavorful if basted occasionally with a tablespoon of wine. Add a peeled onion, a stalk of celery and a carrot to the roasting pan.

Before making gravy, drain the pan juices into a glass jar or measuring cup.

Wait till the fat rises to the surface, then meticulously siphon it off with a squeeze-bulb baster. If, you're not in a hurry, chill the jar until the fat hardens on top; then simply lift it off.

Measure the stock; add water to make the amount of gravy you want.

Reheat in a saucepan. For each cup of gravy wanted, combine two tablespoons flour and four tablespoons cold water in a small cup. Stir to make a paste; then stir the paste into the simmering liquid.

Simmer the gravy until it's the thickness you want. If it's too thick, thin it with a little water or non-fat milk.

Season to taste with pepper, herbs, lemon juice or vinegar. Sprinkle with chopped fresh parsley before serving.

The pamphlet contains additional recipes. Copies of it are available in limited quantities by calling the Heart Association of San Bernardino County at 824-6016.

Computer steps in where mom left off nagging

By Jimmy Thornton
Copley News Service

You must have known it would come to pass: a computer program to nag you about your bad habits, those things you do that are harmful to your health.

It'll nag you if you smoke or if you drink too much.

It'll nag you even if you don't do anything.

It's all part of a health-assessment program called Computerized Health Risk Assessment. You fill out a form confessing your lifestyle, then a computer cranks out a comparison of how long people live doing what you do and the odds on you doing the same.

It looks 10 years ahead into your life to see what your chances are of surviving that long.

The intention is to influence people whose habits are unhealthy to change their lifestyle and thus improve their chances of living longer.

Will the assessment actually predict your demise?

"You'd have to ask God that," says Lela Folkers, a health education consultant for California's Department of Health Services in Sacramento.

On the positive side, she said, the assessment could extend your life.

The health assessments, conducted in a program titled Behavioral Risk Factor Surveys, compare six lifestyle factors identified as health risks. The surveys have been conducted by the national Centers for Disease Control (CDC) in Atlanta in cooperation with California and 19 other states.

The six factors are whether you:

- Smoke.
- Drink, and if so, how much.
- Eat to excess.
- Do something — like exercise.
- Have high blood pressure (hypertension).
- Buckle up when you get in your vehicle (most people don't do so consistently).

The list of factors is similar to the list of health risks identified this week in a three-day health conference in Atlanta, sponsored by former President Jimmy Carter, which concluded that Americans could live longer if they would stop smoking, drink less alcohol, eat more vegetables high in vitamin A and fewer fatty foods and buckle their seat belts.

Medical experts say that ignoring the health risks contributes to 12 major causes of death, including the four leading causes in California — heart disease, cancer, stroke and accidents.

Folkers said an adult from each of 3,000 Californian households participated in the survey. One adult in each household was interviewed by telephone.

The results showed that one in six Californians has high blood pressure. Four percent of women suffer uncontrolled hypertension; 2.4 percent of men do.

It found that 31.5 percent of males smoke; 26.6 percent of females do.

Men are more overweight than women; 18.2 percent of men eat too much compared with 13.7 percent of women.

More women than men perceive themselves to be fat — 29 percent to 26 percent, respectively.

The age group most likely to be overweight: men and women 45 to 64 years old.

The survey also found that more men than women were heavy, chronic drinkers. If you have 56 drinks a month throughout the year, you're overdoing it. The percentage breakdown: men, 15.5; women, 5.1.

As for fastening seat belts, 51.4 percent of men seldom do; women: 47.1 percent. Overall, 34 percent of the drivers surveyed said they always or nearly always buckle up; 17.3 percent sometimes do and 48.3 percent hardly ever do.

The CDC has been conducting the survey for years, but until last year it had been centralized in Atlanta. Now, state health departments are handling the program in cooperation with the CDC.

People who want to participate in the health assessment will have to scout around. There is no central referral service for the health assessment. Some medical plans offer them. Some businesses have their employees complete the questionnaires through an assessment service.

The family doctor or the personnel clerk in charge of medical coverage at work might be able to refer you to a service.

Those who fill out a risk assessment questionnaire feed information about their lifestyle into a computer, which then coughs up the sad facts of life.

It will tell you how many people who live as you do are likely to die within the next 10 years.

You may be advised that you have, say, a life expectancy of 64 years at the rate you are going. Then you may be advised that if you give up a few sins, you can expect to live five years longer. Such predictions are made mostly to help a patient understand the health risks that are being measured.

The assessments are not intended to predict life spans. They merely tell you what to do to reduce the risk of dying early.

That may mean changing at least part of your lifestyle.

Maybe that's just the kind of nagging a lot of us need — even if it does come from a computer.

Big better when it comes to aging wine

By Dan Berger
Copley News Service

It is a question that both genres of wine lovers — romantics and scientists — ignore. It is the question of how a fine wine ages in large bottles.

The wine we're talking about here is made to be aged. It is made from premium grape varieties that are grown in premiumly tended vineyards. The wine is made carefully, not in half-million-gallon tanks. It is not the wine made from poor-quality grapes that happens to be placed inside a gallon jug with a screw cap.

Not all fine wine is made to be aged, but many wine makers know that their wines, particularly red wines, will take on a fineness, a smoothness and a complexity that cannot be mimicked by any process other than placing the bottles in a cool cellar and waiting.

The thorny question that wine people know instinctively, yet refuse to discuss, is that wine ages better in bigger bottles than in smaller bottles. One reason they ignore it is that no one knows why this occurs.

Recently I spent time poring through dozens of wine books, including every major encyclopedia on wine printed in English, looking for references to wine aged in big bottles — magnums (50.8 ounces) and larger. Only in vague terms did any of the authors mention the aging of wine in big bottles vs. how wine ages in smaller bottles.

The best reference to the subject — and still it was vague — was in "Hugh Johnson's Modern Encyclopedia of Wine," one of the best books on all aspects of wine.

Johnson writes that the 750-milliliter bottle "has been accepted by generations as the most convenient regular size" for aging of wines, "but bigger bottles keep wine even better. Length of life, speed of maturity, and level of ultimate quality are all in direct proportion to bottle size. ... (Regular size) bottles are better (than half bottles), and magnums better still."

No one, including wine scientists, can tell precisely why a fine red wine aged in a magnum tastes better, and has a longer life, than the identical wine aged in the standard 750-milliliter bottle.

When a fine red wine is young, its fruit is its most appealing aspect. Yet it is that very quality — fruit — that begins to fade in time, yielding to more complexity. But when the same wine is aged in a magnum or larger bottle, somehow the fruit stays around for a longer period of time — even though the wine does in fact grow more complex. Scientists know this has something to do with the breakdown in polyphenols, the flavor elements, in all wines, but they don't know precisely why or how it occurs.

Said Dr. Maynard Amerine, former chairman of the departments of viticulture and enology at The University of California at Davis, "The nature

Big is better when it comes to aging wine

of this 'bottle bouquet' has not been established. It is not due to any specific ester, although esterification is probably part of the process. It is much easier to recognize than to define."

Magnums have become the collectors' target in recent years because of the way they age. And even the wineries are now getting into the act, saving back some of their best wine and re-releasing them in magnums to show how a fine, well-aged wine will develop.

One such offering is Chateau St. Jean in Sonoma re-releasing its acclaimed 1981 Chardonnay from the famed Robert Young Vineyard in magnums at $40.

The wine originally sold for $18 per bottle, so the price is not much more than two bottles would have been, and the wine is incomparable, one of the best ever made by Chateau St. Jean. It has a typically rich, full Chardonnay aroma, but its crispness in the mouth and lean lines indicate that it will age beautifully for years to come in the magnum.

Another wine being re-released in magnum is the 1975 Clos du Val Cabernet Sauvignon. When this wine was first released, wine maker Bernard Portet said he felt it was one of the finest he ever made, although most people felt his '74 was better wine.

As years have gone by, Portet's estimation of his '75 has been rewarded. The wine today has more fruit and complexity than his '74, and clearly has a long life ahead of it in magnum. Clos du Val's price for this '75 in magnum is $65, a good value for the collectors.

An exciting experience with magnums is comparing them with identical wines from regular-size bottles. And the new Chateau St. Jean and Clos du Val magnum re-releases offer the chance. If you have a bottle of either wine, the magnum would be a fine complement.

And the best way to compare them is to pour them blind for a knowledgeable group by decanting both wines into decanters before serving.

STAMPS

By Lea Blauvelt
Copley News Service

The only things more colorful than the Christmas cards you receive this year will be the stamps that carry them to your mailbox.

Britain reflected traditional religious themes in the five Noel stamps it released Nov. 20.

Stamps of 13-, 17-, 22-, 31- and 34-pence value carried designs titled "Holy Family," "Arrival in Bethlehem," "Shepherd and Lamb," "Virgin and Child" and "Offering of Frankincense," respectively. These special stamps were the work of Yvonne Gilbert. There also is a Christmas stamp book, containing 20 of the 13-pence stamps.

Canada also remained traditional with its three stamps of 32-, 37- and 64-cent denomination that came out Nov. 2, but instead of reproducing old masters dealing with typical scenes of the season, she used more recent paintings.

The 32-cent stamp reproduces "The Annunciation" by Jean Dailaire (1916-1965); the 37 cent "The Three Kings" by Simone Mary Bouchard (1912-1945), and the 64 cent "Snow in Bethlehem" by David Milne (1882-1953). They are lithography prints in four colors, 50 stamps to the pane.

Two exquisite Jersey hybrid orchids are displayed on a set of two stamps issued by that Channel Island on Nov. 15. Each orchid has a local name and has taken the Royal Horticultural Society's prestigious Award of Merit. On the 9 pence is the B.L.C. St. Helier and on the 12 pence the Oda Mount Bingham.

Jersey also offered its citizens a sheetlet of 12 5-pence stamps telling of the 12 days of Christmas. Pictured, of course, on each stamp was the gift for that day: a partridge in a pear tree, two turtle doves, three French hens, four collybirds, five gold rings, six geese a-laying, seven swans a-swimming, eight maids a-milking, nine drummers drumming, 10 pipers piping, 11 ladies dancing and 12 lords a-leaping. (The Bailiwick of Jersey provides its residents with a special rate of postage for Christmas cards sent to addresses within the area — 5 pence, as long as the cards are unsealed.)

From New Zealand, on Sept. 26, came three Christmas stamps in values of 18, 35 and 45 cents, picturing a detail from Lorenzo De Credi's "Adoration of the Shepherds" (1510), Old St. Paul's Church in Wellington and ringing church bells, called "The Joy of Christmas," respectively.

Christmas Island saluted both Christmas and AUSIPEX '84 on the same souvenir sheet Sept.

COINS

By Gary L. Palmer
Copley News Service

For the first time ever Australia has issued a dollar coin and the proof version is now available in the United States.

Australian coins today feature the country's native wildlife and the dollar coin continues that theme.

Stuart Devlin's design is both simple and effective. Dated 1984, the coin's reverse features five kangaroos in characteristic positions. (Wonder if the Aussies will call their new dollar a "buckaroo"?)

The Arnold Machin portrait of Queen Elizabeth II is featured on the obverse.

Struck in aluminum bronze, giving it a distinctive golden color, the coin has a frosted relief and is priced at $15. A presentation case is included.

The '84 Australian proof set contains six coins with wildlife designs. The kangaroo appears with the emu on the 50-cent coin, while a duck-billed platypus is on the 20-cent piece. The dime features the lyrebird, the nickel design is the spiny anteater, the 2-cent piece depicts the frilled lizard and the cent has a feather-tail glider.

Cost of the proof set, struck in cupro-nickel and bronze, is $39.

The proof dollars and proof sets are available through the Royal Australian Mint's North American office, 115 Main Road, Montville, NJ 07045.

They are also available in uncirculated versions. The kangaroo dollar is $6 and the set is $5.

The English pound note, to the consternation of the British people, will officially die Dec. 31, replaced by the 1-pound coin. The 1-pound coin, introduced in 1983, was received about as enthusiastically as the Susan B. Anthony dollar was in the United States.

But by phasing out the pound note, Britain hopes the coin will gain greater acceptance. Though nearly 200 million of the pound coins are in circulation, the English continue to ridicule it, calling it some very uncomplimentary names.

The pound note will still continue to be legal tender for at least a year after production stops.

Earlier this year the British stopped minting the halfpenny, dating back to 1280. At year's end it will no longer be accepted as payment, valued only by sentimentalists and coin collectors.

Speaking of Britain, Canada, a British Commonwealth nation, which traditionally uses the noted Machin portrait of Elizabeth II on its coins, will do so again in '85, despite the fact Britain is phasing out the Machin design.

21, containing three values, 30, 55 and 85 cents. Each has a valueless se-tenant portion. The middle value has the AUSIPEX '84 logo on the valueless section, while the lower and higher values complete mural pictures of Santa Claus with children — giving them presents and waving goodbye.

From Barbados, in October, came four stamps showing modern traditional Christmas items: a poinsettia (50 cents), snow on a mountain (65 cents), a Christmas candle (75 cents) and a design labeled "Christmas Hope," but unexplained ($1).

The Cayman Islands, on Oct. 17, issued four 5-cent se-tenant stamps portraying a beach scene at night with people singing around a bonfire and four 25-cent se-tenant stamps depicting a day beach scene with tourists, plus a $1 souvenir sheet showing singers around a bonfire.

Malawi, on Oct. 15, released four stamps of 7, 20 and 30 tambalas and 1-kwacha value reproducing paintings with religious themes. Respectively, they were "Virgin and Child" by Duccio, "Madonna and Child" by Duccio, "Madonna and Child" by Raphael, "Virgin and Child" by Lippi and the Wilton Diptych.

Norfolk Island is combining its Christmas issue with the centenary of the Methodist Church on five stamps, released Oct. 9. On value of 5, 24, 30, 45 and 85 cents are shown the front; the interior of the old barracks at Kingston — adapted for use as a church; portraits of Rev. and Mrs. A.H. Phelps; the first Congregational Church at Chester, Conn., and a portrait of Rev. Phelps, and the interior of the present-day Methodist church, respectively.

Trinidad and Tobago chose music and means of making it for its Christmas theme, issuing stamps of 10 cents, 30 cents, $1 and $3 in November picturing a band, music, instruments and more musical instruments, respectively.

SPORTS

Adults get new lease on competitive sports

By Bob Muir

Competition is a key element in sports, it's the fuel that ignites the fire in an athlete. But as the athlete ages, competition weakens.

It's not the competitor's fault. It's sports, or the lack of them, which plagues the adult athlete. Gone are Little League baseball and Pop Warner football. Gone are high school and college sports. Gone are desire and fun.

Enter Amateur Competitive Sports, Inc. (Am Com Sports).

The Upland-based organization's aim is to spark the competitive flame in the one-time athlete once again by providing them the opportunity to play a sport, or sports.

Sporting activity for a number of sporting enthusiasts consists of lifting a beer and second-guessing coaches while sitting in a easy chair on the weekends watching televised sporting events. Am Com Sports is trying to pull the Southern California adult athlete from the confines of the easy chair and put them back on the playing field, or court.

This weekend, about 500 softball players are scheduled to play a "C" and "D" classification slo-pitch Am Com tournament in La Verne.

"One of the problems for adults is that they're getting squeezed out of recreation," said Joe Zakem, Am Com chairman of the board.

"Unless you can afford a health or sports club, which the cost is quite considerable for membership, you're getting squeezed."

Government cutbacks, especially Proposition 13, have taken most of the few sporting opportunities away from the adult athletes in the past few years.

"The youth sports are taking over all of the facilities. When Prop 13 passed, they (the state government) closed down all the gymnasiums and cutback on everything. Well, recreation suffers right off the bat," Zakem said.

Adding to the adult athlete's dilemma is that the bulk of what was left financially after the budget cuts in the state's recreation program was given to the youth program.

"They (government) always give priority to the youth, so what was left over is very little for the adults," said Zakem, who works seven days a week for Am Com for an average of 60 hours, while also maintaining a sporting goods merchandizing position and referring high school sports. "When we (Am Com Sports) came in, there was nothing for adults."

Now, there is something for adults, thanks to Am Com.

What began as a two-man Labor Day beach volleyball tournament in 1982 for Am Com, has expanded to include men's flag football, slo-pitch softball, baseball, Am Com Sports offers adults another opportunity to enjoy such recreational activities as slo-pitch softball.

basketball, tennis and 5 and 10K runs. Am Com has organized over 150 tournaments, including women's softball, tennis and volleyball tournaments and long distance runs for women.

TITLE HUNTING — The 1971 Upland Celtics are still after the Mt. View Soccer League title following a 2-0 loss to Claremont last week, despite the play of Travis Castaldi (above) and Eric Chaisongkran (right). The Celtics can clinch the under-12 boys title with a win over Glendora Dec. 15 at Citrus College. Meanwhile, the team will have a rummage sale and car wash at Elderberry School Saturday from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Am Com recreational outlet for adults

two years ago, along with Marty Harrison and a core of friends, has grown tremendously. At a recent Lake Arrowhead tournament, Am Com had about 36 teams, totaling 72 participants. Currently, approximately 600 softball teams play in Am Com tournaments monthly.

Not only has the list of available sports grown, so has Am Com's list of areas it reaches. Currently, it services North Orange County, the East San Gabriel and Pomona Valleys and Riverside/San Bernardino, and the cities of Palm Springs and Lake Arrowhead.

Am Com Sports is a go-between for adult athletes and sporting events. Anybody over 18 years old can play Am Com sports, Zakem said, as long as they are physically capable and show good sportsmanship. Most players are under 30.

"Primarily, it's the adult male we're (Am Com) aiming at," noted Zakem, citing that the non-profit organization has a monthly newsletter mailing list topping 5,000. "One of the reasons is he's under a lot of pressure, he needs a form of physical fitness, he needs a release. They're paying the greatest percentage of taxes and, yet, they don't get to use any of the facilities their taxes pay for. It's all geared off to youth sports or community services."

Not only are there no funds for adult sports, there are no places to play. Finding facilities for adults to compete at is one of the bigger problems Am Com faces.

"As an adult, try and get things. Kids tie-up every field everywhere. And then, the gyms are closed up. We used to go down and shoot baskets, that doesn't exist anywhere. I don't know of an open gym right now," said Zakem.

To make matters worse for Am Com and the adult athlete are the prices cities charge to rent facilities. Budget cutbacks have made many recreational facilities raise prices in order to gain revenue to support programs.

"The prices that cities are charging are ridiculous," stated Zakem. "I'm talking, you could rent a softball field for daytime use only, you're getting just dirt and air, it will cost you $300 to $400 for a weekend. That's way too expensive."

To relieve most of the pressure of Am Com's facility problem, the organization's six-member advisory board, comprised of participating neighboring businessmen, is currently planning to build a softball facility in cooperation with one of the local cities it provides programs for.

Am Com supports its sporting programs by charging teams a minimal playing fee ($135 per 14-player softball team) and through the help of supporters, including beer companies, supermarkets, soft drink manufacturers and local businesses.

If any money is made at a tournament it is put back into the organization. All tournament winning and placing teams receive "usable" awards, like gloves, shoes, uniforms and balls.

"A lot of people who do tournaments, give away lesser awards and walk away with a very good profit. We put the money back into the system," said Zakem.

Am Com also organized a few fundraising tournaments.

In 1982, Am Com raised about $9,300 for Danny Jamarillo, who broke his neck while playing football for Ontario High School, in flag football tournament, featuring Marcus Allen, Lyle Alzado and Jim Plunkett of the Los Angeles Raiders. Am

Com has also raised funds for the Upland American Legion, Pomona's Lanterman State Hospital and a Diamond Bar YMCA.

PETS

By R.G. Elmore
Copley News Service

Q. We raise and show bulldogs. At a recent show one of our dogs was downgraded because the inner eyelid of the dog is very pale.

One of our friends suggested that we have our veterinarian remove the eyelid surgically so that the dog will show better. Our veterinarian refused to do the surgery.

What is your opinion of removing the inner eyelid?

A. Removing the inner or the third eyelid only for cosmetic purposes is a very bad practice in my opinion. The third eyelid is also often referred to as the "haw."

Removal of the third eyelid can lead to serious complications. Ulceration of the cornea and even loss of the eye often follow removal of the third eyelid.

Occasionally it is necessary to remove the third eyelid because of abnormal growths or injury. Your veterinarian can decide which is the lesser of the evils in these situations.

There are several other conditions of the eye worth mentioning while discussing the third eyelid of dogs.

Normally, the eyelids cover the globe of the eye without any problems. The lids are usually not rolled in toward the eye or rolled out away from the eye.

Entropion is a condition in which the eyelids are rolled in toward the eye. This causes constant irritations of the eye and sometimes leads to serious ulcerations. A simple operation can be done by your veterinarian to correct entropion.

There is a definite breed disposition to entropion in the following breeds: chow chow, Chesapeake, golden retriever and Labrador retriever. It has also been reported to occur in the Kerry blue, Saint Bernard, rottweiler, bulldog, English springer spaniel and bullmastiff.

Ectropion is just the opposite to entropion. With ectropion, the eyelid rolls out or drops away from the eye ball. The pouch formed whenever the lid rolls out often gets contaminated with dust, weed awns and other debris. This leads to inflammation of the lids.

There is a breed disposition in the cocker spaniel, bulldog, basset hound, bloodhound and Saint Bernard. Ectropion, like entropion, can be corrected by a fairly simple surgical procedure.

Any dog thought to have problems of the eyelids should be examined by a veterinarian before serious and complicated eye problems develop. Surgery of the structures surrounding the eyes should only be done to correct actual problems — not to please the show judge.

Questions should be mailed to R.G. Elmore, D.V.M., Points on Pets, Copley News Service, in care of this newspaper. Volume of mail prohibits individual responses. Only questions of general interest will be answered in this column.

Correct identity problem before applying for Social Security

Copley News Service

Q. When I wrote for my birth record, I discovered that my middle name is recorded as my first name. I have always used John Nathaniel ever since I can remember but my birth record shows Nathaniel John. Will this make any difference in my eligibility? — J.N.M.

A. No. This does not affect your eligibility. It is only necessary that we establish that John Nathaniel and Nathaniel John are one and the same person.

Q. My mother is on disability and going with a gentleman who is anxious to marry her. However, she is afraid her SSI disability checks will discontinue due to marriage.

Please advise me. — R.B.

A. A change in your mother's marital status does necessitate a review of her eligibility. It is assumed that a husband and wife who live together share their income and resources.

The particular circumstances of her case would determine her continuing eligibility. She should contact her local Social Security office and discuss her situation with them.

Q. I only received one copy of the Social Security Benefit Statement (Form SSA-1099). Do I mail it to IRS along with my tax returns? — J.M.

A. No. Do not attach it to your income tax return. The form is intended only for determining whether you may have to pay taxes on your Social Security benefits. It is issued as a single copy only, and is to be treated the same as a 1099 you would receive from a bank on interest paid.

Q. Will aliens who receive Social Security benefits but live outside the United States have their benefits taxed? — F.L.

A. Yes. Non-resident aliens have already had taxes withheld on monthly Old Age Survivors and Disability Insurance benefits paid after Dec. 31, 1983. Beneficiaries who have been subject to the non-resident tax provision will receive an annual statement of Social Security benefits paid, Form SSA-1042, instead of Form SSA-1099.

Questions on Social Security may be sent to Eugene Williams, Social Security Office, P.O. Box 82727, San Diego, CA 92138.
